FAMILY VIOLENCE SERVICES

What information is kept about me?

We keep your name and contact details on file. We record details about your situation to offer you the best support. With your consent, nonidentifying information is recorded in a national database.

Information sharing scheme

Organisations and case workers who are providing you with family violence support may need to share your information with others. They can do so under Part 5A of the Family Violence Protection Act 2008.

Sharing information is important, so relevant services can work together to keep you (and if applicable, your children) safe. Information will only be shared where it is necessary to assess and manage the risks of family violence.

Consent

If we need to share your information, we will ask for your consent, either verbally or by filling out a form. Please note that in cases of serious threat or where your information is linked to assessing and/or managing the family violence risk to a child victim/survivor, the law permits information to be shared about any person without consent.
